Call for Faculty Proposals for Curriculum Development for the Proposed Environmental Studies Program

Summer Stipends for 2011
Deadline March 25, 2011

As you are aware, the College has received a grant from the Mellon Foundation to aid us in developing a program in Environmental Studies at Lafayette College.

The Environmental Studies Steering Committee is soliciting proposals for the next round of curriculum development grants, which are available again this summer (2011). Each grant provides a stipend of $4,000 and the committee will also consider requests for course development funds (travel, materials, etc). Team-taught courses would provide stipends of $3,000 for each of two faculty developing a course together.

Proposals for Summer 2011 are due by March 25, and should include a preliminary description of the proposed course, and a statement describing how the content of the course offers a significant contribution to the curriculum for a proposed environmental studies program. Please let the committee know if this proposed course fits into your normal teaching load, or what departmental (or program) changes would be required if this course were to be offered. Proposals should be only one or two pages long.

If you are developing a course that includes significant subject matter that is covered in a department other than yours, please speak with the appropriate Department Head(s) as you develop the course proposal.

Please submit your proposal to Dru Germanoski, Department of Geology and Environmental Geosciences or as an attached file via email to: germanod@lafayette.edu. The Environmental Studies Steering Committee will make recommendations to the Provost for the award of curriculum development grants.
